Is your organization’s menu of employee benefits competitive in today’s labor market? The sixth International Foundation Employee Benefits Survey provides benchmarking data on the benefit offerings of 677 organizations representing nearly 20 industries and ranging in size from fewer than 50 to more than 10,000 employees. Respondents answered questions on a wide variety of retirement, health and other benefits topics, including voluntary and work/life benefits.

Here’s a look at some of the findings.
