

Jean-Martin Aussant

Senior Vice-President
Optimum Management
Montreal, Quebec

Jean-Martin Aussant is senior vice-president, U.S. market and counsel in sustainable investment at Optimum Quantvest Corporation. He studied music, economics, finance and actuarial science at various institutions in Canada, England and Spain before embarking on an international career, mostly in North America and Europe. Aussant spent many years with Morgan Stanley Capital International (MSCI) where he served as vice-president and executive director in London and Montreal. He also headed the Chantier de l'économie sociale, a major civil society economic development body in Canada. Prior to that, he cumulated many years of experience as portfolio manager, director of quantitative research and risk manager with various firms, including PSP Investments, Addenda Capital and Céos Family Office. Aussant's career also includes acting as a consultant in quantitative finance for many major corporations in Canada. In parallel, he cofounded the largest international association of risk managers, PRMIA. Very much attached to the collective, Aussant served as a member of parliament in Quebec and remains very active in his community by sitting on various nonprofit boards related to economic development, education and culture. He can be seen weekly on national Canadian television to comment on the economy.
