

Tami Damiani

Vice President, Business Development
Premise Health
Brentwood, Tennessee

As vice president of new business for Premise Health, Tami Damiani oversees all new business development activities and sales operations within the central region of the United States. In her role, Tami shares Premise's model and solutions with organizations that are investigating advanced primary care for the first time or looking to enhance or modify their current direct primary care offerings. She works with these organizations and their leadership teams to develop and implement successful population health management strategies that result in improved health, cost containment, employee engagement, and productivity enhancement. She enjoys helping clients execute on their strategic vision and develop creative solutions that are meaningful and valuable for their members and their families. Her passion is helping organizations reach their full potential through their most important asset: their employees' well-being.

Tami has more than 20 years of experience working in the direct primary care industry in various capacities. Previous roles include healthcare consulting (licensed life and health agent), associate vice president of client services, and vice president of sales. Tami earned her master's degree in healthcare administration from the University of Colorado and her bachelor's degree in supply chain management from Michigan State University.

Tami has lived and worked throughout Michigan, North Carolina, Colorado, Massachusetts, and Amsterdam. She currently resides in Rochester Michigan, with her husband and three children.
