

Lise Galli, M.B.A.

Principal
ExcelerateHR
Toronto, Ontario

Lise Galli founded ExcelerateHR Services after over two decades in executive leadership roles in private industry. As a senior leader across the transportation, environmental and energy sectors, Lise has led transformative change efforts, built strong talent pipelines, and introduced innovative HR programs and metrics. Lise's unique ability to "see the big picture" and translate corporate strategy into practical and measurable human resource solutions has positioned her as a value-add partner to her clients. She currently consults in both the private and public sectors in all areas of HR operations, compensation and strategy. Her passion is supporting organizations to build their HR infrastructure through technology, process and people development. Lise holds an Honours Bachelor of Commerce from McMaster University and an M.B.A. degree from the University of Phoenix. She received her Six Sigma black belt training through Price Waterhouse Coopers and has completed leadership development training at several leading institutions including Harvard University, Queen's University and the Schulich School of Business. Lise currently sits on the Advisory Board for the Human Resource Program at Mohawk College.
