Rae Godsey, DO, MBA

Group Medicare Chief Medical Officer
Humana
Louisville, Kentucky

Dr. Rae Godsey is Humana's Group Medicare chief medical officer. Dr. Godsey joined Humana in 2009. She is board certified in family medicine and has over 20 years of clinical and managed care experience, including extensive experience in medical management, quality management, risk adjustment, Stars and value-based care. In her current role, Dr. Godsey is focused on driving results through strategic initiatives that lead to improved health outcomes for members and results in financial sustainability. Prior to her current role, Dr. Godsey spent six years in Humana's HQRI organization, where she was instrumental in creating a new team that supports physicians and health care providers with risk adjustment and Stars initiatives. Dr. Godsey spent the preceding six years leading Humana's regional clinical team, overseeing development and management of clinical operational processes, procedures, policies and standards to align with evidence-based medicine and regulatory guidance for clinical case reviews in utilization management and oversight of case management programs. Prior to joining Humana, Dr. Godsey was chief executive officer of Godsey Family Medicine, where she and her clinical team delivered a full spectrum of clinical services with a focus on quality and improved patient outcomes, for both inpatient and outpatient settings. Dr. Godsey speaks frequently to health care industry groups and serves on the Louisville Health Advisory Board (LHAB) as well as the Indiana University Kelley School–Business of Medicine M.B.A. Alumni Board. She is also a member of the Humana Bold Goal board of directors for Louisville, Kentucky and Charleston, West Virginia.
