

Marissa Kalkman, M.S., MCHES®, CWP

Senior Manager, Learning and Engagement
Kern National Network for Flourishing Medicine
Brookfield, Wisconsin

Marissa Kalkman currently serves as the senior manager of learning and engagement for the Kern National Network for Flourishing in Medicine (KNN). The KNN is a national movement with the aspirational goal to advance character, caring, and practical wisdom in medicine and to ignite a positive culture change that helps individuals, organizations, and society flourish. She is a trusted learning and leadership development advisor, doctoral student, and aspiring social scientist and researcher with 15 years of professional experience spanning employee well-being, non-profit administration, organizational leadership, and curating learning environments for students and professionals. Marissa is a master certified health education specialist (MCHES®), a certified wellness practitioner (CWP), and she has completed professional coach training. Marissa is pursuing a doctorate in educational psychology and leadership. She earned her master's degree in health promotion and health education from Indiana University.