

Thomas J. Kriger, Ph.D.

Director of Research and Education
North America's Building Trades Unions
Washington, D.C.

Thomas J. Kriger is the director of research and education at North America's Building Trades Unions (NABTU). From 2008 to 2012, he was the professor of labor studies and provost and vice president for academics at the National Labor College. Kriger served as assistant to the president and director of legislation and research for the American Federation of Teachers' largest higher education local union, United University Professions (#2190), from 1998 to 2007. He has held faculty positions at the University of Northern Colorado, Providence College and St. Lawrence University. Kriger is the author of numerous publications on labor issues.