

Steven B. Miller, M.D.

Executive Vice President and Chief Clinical Officer
Cigna Corporation
Saint Louis, Missouri

Steven B. Miller is the executive vice president and chief clinical officer at Cigna Corporation. He is a nationally recognized advocate for greater access, affordability and excellence in health care, leading all the company's clinical policy, quality and performance efforts.

Dr. Miller was appointed chief clinical officer for Cigna when the company acquired Express Scripts in December 2018. He formerly served as Express Scripts' senior vice president and chief medical officer, responsible for supporting government relations, leading the Pharmacy and Therapeutics committee, managing the Medical Affairs team, leading Government Affairs and interfacing with client groups. During his 12 years in that position, Dr. Miller focused on improving health outcomes and value through e-prescribing initiatives, specialty solutions and overall product development. Dr. Miller's expertise represents years as a medical researcher, clinician and administrator and spans numerous health care subjects. He previously was the vice president and chief medical officer at Barnes-Jewish Hospital, Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis. Dr. Miller received his medical degree from the University of Missouri-Kansas City. He trained in the pathology and research fellowship at the University of Alabama at Birmingham and was the William J. and Dorothy Fish Kerr Fellow in cardiology at the University of California, San Francisco. Dr. Miller also did internal medicine training at the University of Colorado and Nephrology and Transplantation at Washington University in St. Louis. He earned his M.B.A. degree at the Olin School of Business at Washington University.