

Jack Ramage

Professional Trustee
St. Johns, Florida

Jack Ramage is a retired construction industry trade association executive who now serves as a professional trustee on numerous Taft-Hartley pension and welfare funds. As the executive director of the Master Builders' Association of Western Pennsylvania (MBA) and the Ohio Valley Construction Employers Council, Inc. (OVCEC), he was responsible for the day-to-day operations and overseeing the activities of the organizations. Ramage's primary responsibilities were concentrated on construction industry labor relations, where he directly managed all facets of the associations' labor relations activities, including the negotiation and administration of dozens of labor contracts and personally serving as a trustee on numerous construction industry Taft-Hartley fringe benefit funds, as well as appointing and monitoring trustees on many other plans. In addition to being a professional trustee, Ramage currently serves on the International Foundation Board of Directors and the Financial Review Committee and is a regular presenter at the Trustees Masters Program (TMP). Previous International Foundation activities include chairing the Apprenticeship, Training and Education Committee as well as serving on the Trustees Committee.
