

Tim Shortill

Chief Operating Officer
Healthcare of Ontario Pension Plan (HOOPP)
Toronto, Ontario

Mr. Shortill is HOOPP's chief operating officer, and he is responsible for the operational leadership of the information technology and facilities services and communications and public affairs divisions. Mr. Shortill is accountable for delivering on HOOPP's vision while contributing to the development of its strategic direction and the overall management of the organization. He has held senior positions in both the pension world and in government. Most recently, Mr. Shortill was senior vice president of strategy, communications and public affairs at OPSEU Pension Trust (OPTrust), where he worked with and advised the board of trustees, the CEO and senior management. Mr. Shortill led strategic initiatives and communications for the organization with emphasis on building the brand and mitigating reputational risk. Previously, he spent more than 10 years with the Government of Ontario, including as chief of staff to the Minister of Finance, where he helped craft and implement four provincial budgets, and as chief of staff to the Minister of Transportation. Mr. Shortill holds a B.A. degree in political science from Western University and an M.B.A. degree from the Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto.
