

Katie Spiker

Managing Director of Government Affairs
National Skills Coalition
Washington, D.C.

Katie Spiker is the managing director of government affairs at National Skills Coalition (NSC), where she works to advance NSC's Washington-based policy efforts through federal legislation, agency regulation and national funding initiatives. As a workforce policy expert, Spiker works closely with members of Congress and their staff, as well as Cabinet agencies—like the Departments of Labor and Education—to develop and implement bipartisan workforce policy solutions to help workers and businesses succeed. She also partners with state and local workforce leaders to elevate their advocacy efforts to lawmakers in Washington. Spiker has authored numerous publications on workforce policy issues, and her policy expertise, insights and commentary have been cited and published in local and national media outlets, including CNN, The Hill, Bloomberg, Morning Consult, Inside Higher Ed, The Hechinger Report, IndustryWeek, San Diego Union-Tribune and many other outlets. Prior to joining NSC, she was the associate director of the National Center for Women's Employment Equity at Wider Opportunities for Women, where she managed the design and provision of on-site and virtual technical assistance and the creation of case studies and policy briefs related to nontraditional occupations and occupational segregation. Spiker has also consulted with the Institute for Women's Policy Research and the National Women's Law Center. She served as policy counsel for Workplace Flexibility and the National Partnership for Women and Families as a Women's Law and Public Policy Fellow. Spiker is a 2015 Ford Foundation Public Voices Fellow. She holds a J.D. degree from Georgetown University Law Center and a bachelor's degree from the University of Miami. She is based in Washington, D.C.