

Aisha Tucker-Brown, Ph.D., MSW

Senior Evaluator
Centers for Disease Control
Atlanta, Georgia

Aisha Tucker-Brown is a senior evaluator in the Applied Research and Evaluation Branch, Division for Heart Disease and Stroke Prevention, at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). She has led CDC projects on evaluability assessment, rigorous effectiveness evaluations, enhanced evaluability assessments of public health programs, and scaling and spreading effective public health programs. Tucker-Brown has led CDC evaluation efforts for national Division for Heart Disease and Stroke cooperative agreements and evaluation initiatives currently being implemented at the CDC. She is currently working on the dissemination of a hypertension management tool kit for health care providers and the development of social determinants of health performance measures for chronic disease. Tucker-Brown received her MSW from Clark Atlanta University and a Ph.D. from the University of Georgia School of Social Work.